

Huddle Spaces: Small investments creating big results

A growing trend among companies around the world is the emergence of “huddle spaces” as the principal area where collaboration takes place as opposed to conventional boardrooms and conference venues. These zones are ideal for getting small groups of key decision makers in the same room where they can work together in person or with remote colleagues to drive collaboration and increase productivity throughout an organisation.

For a huddle space's effectiveness to be optimised it needs to incorporate world-class presentation and video conferencing solutions while allowing users to connect their own equipment to these facilities quickly and seamlessly. This support for the bring-your-own-device (BYOD) movement in corporate culture is a crucial component of a huddle space because employees naturally feel more comfortable interacting with the technology they use on a day-to-day basis.

The main benefits of huddle spaces include:

- Existing areas such as an unused office can easily be converted into one
- Up to 80% less cost than a conventional boardroom
- Efficient use of space and staff resources
- Improved employee interaction and engagement with collaboration technology

- A cosier, more intimate environment for team members to collaborate within
- Compatible with technology that employees are already familiar with
- Greater collaboration leads to improved productivity and hastens decision making
